An argument was heard in the United States Circuit Court yesterday, on a motion for a new trial in the case of C. H. Aiken, executor of A. O. Smith, against the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company. The suit was to recover $10,000, the amount of a policy on the life of Smith, who, it was claimed by the company, had committed suicide from disappointed love. The decision was reserved.

While Mrs. Whiteling Mrs. Whiteling was the first woman to be legally hanged in Philadelphia. Her bear-ing throughout the terrible ordeal was a most remarkable exhibition of fortitude and resignation to her fate. During the early morning she never for a moment showed the slightest evidence of weakness, and frequently expressed her pleasure at the prospect of "meeting her husband and children." The several physicians who were present at the execution, and who have more or less frequently been with the condemned woman since her incarceration, expressed surprise at her exhibition of calm-

LAST NIGHT ON EARTH. Mrs. Whiteling spent her last night in walking about her cell, singing and praying, in which she was joined at intervals by Mrs. Weaver, the prison matron, and watch woman, who were with her throughout the night. Shortly before 6 o'clock she ate with apparent relish a breakfast consisting of fried eggs, toast and chocolste. Soon after that hour she was taken from her cell in the female department to a cell in the male de-partment in the corridor of which the scal-fold for her execution was standing.

She was joined in her new cell by her spiritual adviser, Rev. Wm. D. Jones, of the Scott Methodist Episcopal Church, and Samuel W. Kehr, undertaker, who is also a local Methodist preacher, and who also officiated at the burials of her poisoned hus-band and childen. Mrs. Whiteling joined in the devotional services with considerable spirit, and apparently obtained much com-fort therefrom. At 10 o'clock the condemned woman was brought from the cell and Sheriff Krummbharr and Prison Phy-ician Paxson headed the procession to the scaffold. Mrs. Whiteling was escorted by the two ministers, and mounted the scaffold without an apparent tremor. A moment

There have previously been but two cases of women sentenced to capital punishment in this country. On April 21 1021 2012 in this county. On April 21, 1885, Judge Mitchell passed sentence of death upon Annie Cutler, who was convicted of the murder of William H. Knight. In February, 1868, Hester Vaughan, an English girl, was convicted of the murder of her child and sentenced to be hanged. Both women, however, escaped the death pen-

HER HORRIBLE CRIME. The crime for which Mrs. Whiteling suffered the extreme penalty of the law was the poisoning of her husband and two children, with arsenic, for the purpose of secur-ing the small insurance which she carried on each of their lives. The Whiteling family consisted of John Whiteling, the busband and father, aged 36 years; Bertha, 9 years old; Willie, nearly 3, and Sarah J. Whiteling, the murderess, who was two years older than her husband. The husband died on March 20, 1888, and the doctor who attended gave a certificate of death from inflammation of the bowels. On the 24th of April Bertha died, and the same doctor cer-tified that she died of gastric fever. Willie died May 26, as was supposed at the time of congestion of the bowels. Dr. Smith, who had attended the two previous cases, refused to take charge of Willie's case, and another doctor was called in.

After the third death, Dr. Smith's suspicions were aroused that all was not right, and he communicated his suspicions to the coroner, who ordered that the bodies be ex-humed. An analysis of the parts showed the presence of enough arsenic to cause death. The Cornor summoned Mrs. White-ling before him, and charged her with kill-ing her husband and children. After some hesitation the woman admitted that she had poisoned her children, but claimed that her husband took his own life. She made a full confession, minutely detailing the agonies of her victims in their death strug-gles. She first told how her husband, who was sickly and had been ailing for several weeks, had told her that he had taken a porweeks, had told her that he had taken a por-tion of a box of poison which she had bought for use in driving vermin from the house. She summoned a physician, but did not tell him that her husband had taken the poison, because, as she said, of a clause in his insurance policy which declared that no money would be paid to suicides.

THE PITIFUL TEMPTATION. His life was insured in an industrial com-

His life was insured in an industrial company for $145, and he was also a member of a benevotent order of Buffalo, which organization paid the widow $65. About one month after the death of the husband, Mrs. Whiteling began administering poison to her daughter Bertha, who is described as having been a sweet-faced, dark-haired child, the favorite in the school which she attended. A doctor was called in after the neighbors had urged it though Mrs. Whiteling declared that she had a premonition neighbors had urged at though Mrs. White-ling declared that she had a premonition that her child would not live.

The doctor left powders to be given every half hour, but instead of giving the medi-cine the unnatural mother gave her child poison, and in three days the little girl was dead. Her life was insured for $122. One month later the woman decided to kill her little boy, whose life was insured for $47, and she used the same method described in Bertha's case. Altogether, the insurance she realized by the three deaths amounted to $399.

Mrs. Whiteling's trial took place last November, the defense raised being insanity, but her counsel were totally unable, though a number of insanity experts were called, to prove their client insane, and she was con-victed and sentenced to be hanged. Every effort was made by Mrs. White-ling's counsel to save her life, first by tryling's counsel to save her life, first by trying to prove her insane and also on the sentimental ground that, being a woman, the extreme penalty of the law should not be administered. A number of philanthropic women also interested themselves in her behalf and endeavored to secure a commutation of the death sentence, but all efforts were unavailing, and the miserable woman had to hang, the only elemency extended her being a short respite by the Governor.

His last night on earth was spent in prayer. He refused to partake of breakfast, taking only a cup of milk and saying to the Sheriff that he was ready, and to hurry his work without any delay, as he was prepared to die. He was courageous to the very last moment, walking to the scaffold accompanied by Rev. Father O'Haran, of this city; Father Chorisco, of Scranton, and Fathers Dunn and Chorist, of Plains. A few weeks later Mike's companions took passage on a steamer for Italy, the Pinkertons permitting them to leave with the money unmolested, though Mike was still kept under surveillance. Later evidence was procured by detectives which frightened Mike into a full confession on January 5, 1889. Cured of Catarrhal Asthma. Mrs. Alice Brownhill, an English lady, but who has lived in this country for nearly two years, has for the past ten years been be afflicted with asthma. It was produced by a catarrhal poison in her system that was slowly but surely doing its deadly work. A part of the secretion that formed in her head was discharged through her nose, and a part dropped down the back part of her throat, and which, setting up an irritated condition in her lungs, produced asthma. She coughed, and her breath produced asthma. She coughed, and her breath at times was very short. She had pains under her shoulder blades, and also over her eyes. Her appetite was very poor, and the little food she was able to eat gave her stomach much distress and belching of gas, and every morning she would vomit up her food. As has been stated, her breath was very short, and every time she caught a cold she would have to be boistered up in bed during the night in order to breathe. When she applied, last April, to the physicians of the Catarrh and Dyspepsia Institute for treatment, the wheezing in her lungs could be heard all over the house. On May 24 she says "that my catarrh and asthma have been entirely cured by the physicians of the Catarrh and Dyspepsia Institute. I hereby sign my name.
